Electronic Application Disclosure Documents Final Expense – Tennessee

Dear Applicant:

We are pleased to accept your application for life insurance. The application process will be completed electronically. The electronic application process allows you to review all of the information entered into the application form for accuracy before you sign. Your agent will ask all application questions and record your answers as you provide them. Once the application is complete, you will be asked to review all of the information before typing your name in the signature section.

After the electronic document is signed, it is reviewed one more time before being submitted to the Company. If any changes are required at this point, the signature process will be repeated after the changes are made, including another final review before the application is transmitted to the Company. Typing your name into the electronic document indicates your acceptance of its terms. Your electronic signature is legally binding.

Columbian's electronic application, and in particular electronic signature systems and processes use Adobe's PDF SSL digital encryption and lock down facilities. Columbian uses the signed PDF documents as the authoritative data. The electronic application process requires positive action on the part of the proposed insured and the agent and immediately produces a corresponding locked PDF document. Any subsequent alterations will be easily viewed as it will break the PDF locked and encrypted validation seals. Additionally, the data collected and the PDF document will be kept in separate but secured systems providing another validation method.

Columbian's digital signature process involves using an enterprise custom certificate authority. This certificate is a file in a folder on the Columbian hosting server. Once stored on the hosting server, an applicant's signature may not be transmitted to any other forms.

To protect the privacy of the information collected HTTPS (SSL) certificates are employed to encrypt the entire application data gathering session. All collected data is stored in secured databases with access granted only to appropriate Company staff.

DocuSign eSignature complies with the U.S. ESIGN Act and UETA.

All of the Company's data and systems, including that of the electronic application data and process, are secured using current technology standards and procedures that undergo a variety of both internal and external audits and periodic reviews of the process and of the systems to ensure they are kept current.

We are providing you with printed versions of the disclosure documents checked below. Please keep these items with your important insurance documents.
